Property Owner Cold-Call Script

Goal of the first call: start a conversation, not close a deal. Fill in the brackets before you dial.

1. Opener (first 10 seconds)

> "Hi, is this [Owner Name]?
>
> Great. My name is [Your Name], I'm with [Company]. I'll be brief. I'm calling about your property at [Address]. Do you have a quick minute?"

- Yes: go to section 2.
- "Who is this / how'd you get my number?" "Fair question. Property ownership is public record, and I reach out directly to owners in [area] where I'm looking to buy. I'm not a broker trying to list your property."
- "Bad time": "No problem. Is there a better time later today or tomorrow?" Book a specific time.

2. Purpose (keep it low-pressure)

> "I'm a local investor and I buy properties in [neighborhood/submarket]. Yours caught my eye. I don't know if you've ever thought about selling, but I wanted to ask directly: if the price and terms were right, would you be open to a conversation about selling it?"

Then stop talking and let them answer.

3. Branches

A) "Maybe" or "Depends on the price"

> "That makes sense. Can I ask a few quick questions so I can see if I'm even in the right ballpark?"

Go to section 4.

B) "No, not interested"

> "Totally understand, and I appreciate you being straight with me. Just out of curiosity, is that a 'never' or a 'not right now'?"

- If "not right now": "Would it be okay if I checked back in [6 months]?"
- If "never": "Got it. Thanks for your time, and have a great day." Mark them do-not-call.

C) "Make me an offer"

> "I'd love to, but I want it to be a real number and not a lowball. Let me ask a few questions first so I can get you something serious."

Go to section 4.

4. Discovery questions (pick what fits)

1 "How long have you owned it?"

2. “Is it owner-occupied, or is it rented right now?” If rented: “Roughly what are the rents, and how's occupancy?”
3. “Any major work done recently, or anything that needs attention: roof, HVAC, etc.?”
4. “Is there anyone else involved in the decision, like a partner or spouse?”
5. Motivation: “If you did sell, what would you do next?” or “What would make selling worth it to you?”
6. Timing: “Ideally, when would something like that make sense for you?”
7. Price: “Do you have a number in mind where you'd say ‘yes, I'd sell at that’?”
8. Debt/terms (optional): “Is the property free and clear, or is there a loan on it?” This tells you whether seller financing or a subject-to deal could work.

5. Close: set the next step

> “I really appreciate you walking me through that. Here's what I'd suggest: let me run some numbers and get back to you by [day] with a real offer or range. Would it be all right to [see the property / get a rent roll or P&L / meet for coffee]?
>
> What's the best number and email to reach you?”

Confirm their contact info and the next date before you hang up.

6. Quick objection handlers

They say	You say
“It's not for sale.”	“Understood. Most of what I buy isn't listed. I'm just asking whether you'd consider it at the right price.”
“You're going to lowball me.”	“I'd rather pay a fair price and close smoothly than waste your time. That's why I'm asking questions first.”
“I'd have to talk to my agent.”	“Absolutely, I'm happy to work with them. Mind if I send you something in writing you can share?”
“Taxes would kill me.”	“That's common. There are ways to structure it, like a 1031 exchange or seller financing, that can help. Worth talking through with your CPA.”
“Just send me something in the mail.”	“Happy to. What's the best address? And so the letter isn't generic, is there a price range that would get your attention?”

Tips

- Tone: relaxed and curious, not salesy. Talk less than they do.
- Notes: log motivation, timing, price expectations, and the follow-up date in your CRM after every call.
- Follow-up: most deals come from the 3rd to 6th touch, not the first call.
- Compliance: before cold-calling, scrub your list against the National Do Not Call Registry and your state's rules. TCPA rules are stricter for cell phones, especially with auto-dialers or texts. Honor do-not-call requests right away.
